11/25/25 – Hey y'all! This document is…. exceptionally unorganized right now, you can definitely see where I started and abandoned various formatting conventions as the doc goes on. Things should be at least mostly sequentially ordered, with the exception of the Hobby Lobby section which is a mess. I'm going to be cleaning this up hopefully this weekend, within the next week for sure.

Thanks so much to these photographers who were kind enough to let me use some of their images:

06:17 image: "Here's where your parachute came from," Deena Clark, civilian defense volunteer tells Technical Sergeant Leo Matkins of the Army Air Corps. The worn out nylon stockings in this barrel full of salvaged stockings will be reprocessed and made into parachutes for army fliers, tow ropes for glider planes and other war material. The worn out silk stockings return to service as powder bags for the Army's big guns. The collection is typical of the thousands of salvage stations in retail stores throughout the country, which have collected 626,127 pounds of old silk and nylon stockings in three months. The campaign is directed by local salvage committees
